
Took a spill last night

I'll try to keep the story short. I was riding one of my shit bikes (dumpster special) back from work down 3900 south from 2700 east last night around 8pm. traffic was kinda busy and I was cold so I was just coasting downhill. I'm not sure exactly what events caused me to loose control, I was focused on things in my head more than riding the bike, cause the next thing you know I was kissing the asphalt. :(

The bike toppled forward, launching me head first to the ground, I rolled with fall, so no broken bones, just a nice big fat lip, a little roadrash to my forehead and right elbow,

I got up, right away and searched for my broken glasses, and pulled the bike out of the street. called for a ride home, cause i just wasnt in the mood to ride the rest of the way with a cut up face.

anyhow, everythings cool now, Just got a lot of bandaids on my face.

thats rough. my last spill was during a rain storm and i was coming off the crosswalk onto those slick pedestrian sidewalk areas on Sunnyside, heading toward emigration canyon. it happened so long ago, i forgot of the pains of having a spill. thanks for the reminder that even though bicycling makes you feel free, that a spill is a step away.

hope you recover quickly.

I'm glad to hear you're ok, man! Shit. I hope you're not too achy to ride with us this weekend!

Yeah! I'm still looking forward the U bomb, I just hope the big bandage on my forehead doesn't discourage anyone from riding...
